THE SIGNIFICANCE OF AL-GHAZALI'S MAŞLAḤAH CONCEPT TO THE DEVELOPMENT OF UŞŪL FIQH AND ISLAMIC LAW

Yeni Mafiah¹, Tri Wahyu Hidayati²
Islamic State University of Salatiga, Indonesia¹,²
Email: yenimafiahaja@gmail.com¹, bidayatiabid@gmail.com²

Abstract

The purpose of this research was to examine the significance of al-Ghazali's maṣlaḥah concept to the development of uṣūl fiqh and Islamic law. This research method was qualitative with descriptive analytic presentation and the research type was library research. The research result showed that the concept of maṣlaḥah al-Ghazali was used in solving problems of Islamic law because the principle in maṣlaḥah was maintaining the objectives of Islamic law (maqāṣid al-syarī‘ah), covering religion, soul, mind, lineage, and property. There were six points of significance of al-Ghazali's maṣlaḥah concept in the development of uṣūl fiqh and Islamic law, namely, the important role of al-Ghazali's maṣlaḥah concept in uṣūl fiqh and Islamic legal thought, al-Ghazali’s rejection of the concept of maṣlaḥah, al-Ghazali’s maṣlaḥah had no basis in nas, al-Ghazali’s emphasized on preserving the objective objectives of Islamic law, al-Ghazali’s maṣlaḥah as a tool to weigh the benefits and losses of an action or decision, and al-Ghazali’s maṣlaḥah determined whether or not an action or decision was permissible. This concept helped the ulama to make decisions that were in line with the principles of Islamic law.

Keywords: Al-Ghazali, Maṣlaḥah, Uṣūl Fiqh, Islamic Law

A. Introduction

This research is motivated by the growing development of Islamic law and the science of uṣūl fiqh along with the development of Islam itself. It can be understood as a response to the increasingly complex challenges of the times.¹ In the context of globalization and modernization, Muslims are faced with various political, economic, and social changes that affect their lives.² In the last few centuries, there has been an expansion of knowledge including the science of uṣūl fiqh and the development of

---

Islamic law, and an increasing number of researches have been conducted in this field. It is inseparable from the growth of Muslims around the world and their increasing interest in studying the teachings of their religion in greater depth.³

If there is a Prophet after Muhammad, it must be al-Ghazali, so Nicholson once speculated about Imam al-Ghazali. Al-Ghazali is a writer and thinker who is broad-minded, because al-Ghazali’s curiosity about science and truth is very high, it is only natural that al-Ghazali becomes an expert in many fields, especially in Islamic scientific fields such as theology, philosophy, Sufism and Jurisprudence. These works are the most important and are widely known by many people.⁴ To gain a more complete understanding of al-Ghazali’s perceptions and to find out how his basic views are connected to other scientific fields he has mastered, it is important to raise al-Ghazali’s ideas in the field of fiqh. The underlying premise is that fiqh thinking tends to be legal-formal rather than substantive when separated from other Islamic studies.⁵ Imam al-Ghazali can be said to be the first scholar who clearly and comprehensively explained the concept of maslahah in his thoughts.⁶

Here, the author is interested in research with a focus on the concept of maslahah al-Ghazali and its significance for the development of usul fiqh and Islamic law. Previously, the author had conducted a previous literature review and found research by M. Zaki with the title "Maslahah Standard Formulation in Islamic Law (Study of Al-Ghazali’s Thought in Al-Mustashfa Book)". According to the results of his research, istishlah/maslahat can become a benchmark for establishing Islamic law if it fulfills the following requirements: First, by the objectives of syara’, namely protecting property, religion, soul, mind, and future generations. It is the main condition for receiving maslahah mursalah. Maslahah mulgāh that deviates from texts or ijma’ must be ignored. The same thing applies to maslahah garibah (no texts that support or deny it). Second, if maslahat ātur or interests that fill the role of

The Significance of Al-Ghazali’s Maṣlaḥah Concept to the Development of Uṣūl Fiqh and Islamic Law

The Maṣlaḥah concept cannot be used as a basis for establishing Islamic law unless there is clear evidence to support it. Therefore, the law is determined through the qiyyās process and not in the name of mashlaḥah mursalah. Third, at least in the examples cited by al-Ghazali or others, maṣlaḥah mursalah meets the requirements of ḍarūrāt (general), kulliyah (overall), and qaṭ‘iyyah (certain). From the case examples, it appears that istilaḥ (maslahat) is only applied to problems in the muamalah realm, not to problems directly related to worship. That way, according to al-Ghazali, maṣlaḥah is only related to muamalah.

Then Ahmad Munif Suratmaputra’s research entitled "Reorientation of Al-Ghazali’s Thoughts about Maṣlaḥah Mursalah with Islamic Law Renewal". The results of his research concluded that according to al-Ghazali, "Maṣlaḥah mursalah is not an argument that stands alone from the Qur’an, as-Sunnah, or ijma.” As a result, in al-Ghazali’s view, maṣlaḥah continues to be considered an approach to applying Islamic law, not as a reference to Islamic law. Ahmad came to a further conclusion that al-Ghazali did not explain that maṣlaḥah mursalah was specifically applied to muamalah/tradition and not to worship. Moreover, all the examples given are not related to the topic of worship.

Another study from Nur Asiah entitled "Maṣlaḥah according to the Concept of Imam Al Ghazali". The results of his research concluded that according to al-Ghazali, maṣlaḥah are: First, although al-Ghazali’s way of thinking is closely related to the revelation, he believes that reason has a place in solving difficulties in human life because revelation conveys to reason, while problems in human life it will get heavier. Second, the four pillars of law are the Qur’an, bādi‘, ijma‘, and qiyyās (excluding maṣlaḥah). Maṣlaḥah is categorized after qiyyās by al-Ghazali, because according to him maṣlaḥah is only a complement to the four pillars.

---

Research on the significance of al-Ghazali's macsalaḥab concept for the development of the science of uṣūl fiqh and Islamic law is also important to fill the existing knowledge gap. In its history, the concept of macsalaḥab al-Ghazali has made a significant contribution to the development of the science of uṣūl fiqh and Islamic law.\(^\text{10}\) However, several aspects still need further study to respond to current challenges and needs. In this context, in-depth and comprehensive research is needed to explore and expand our understanding of Islam. The purpose of this research is to examine the concept of macsalaḥab al-Ghazali and examine the significance of macsalaḥab's al-Ghazali concept to the development of the uṣūl fiqh and Islamic law. This research is also expected to contribute to a better understanding of the significance of al-Ghazali's macsalaḥab concept to the development of the science of uṣūl fiqh and Islamic law.

B. Method

This research method is qualitative which uses descriptive analytic methods and the type of research is library research.\(^\text{11}\) The qualitative method is used because this method has the advantage of being relative, being able to interpret and interpret data in depth, as well as its flexibility in exploring more comprehensive information. The data used are primary data sourced from journals and books.

In conducting his research, the author identified journal articles, books, and websites about al-Ghazali’s macsalaḥab concept on the development of Islamic jurisprudence and Islamic law. Data collection is carried out by analyzing the significance of al-Ghazali's macsalaḥab concept to the development of uṣūl fiqh and Islamic law. Then, the writer identifies the main arguments and legal points discussed and the authors conducted a study of the concepts that had been obtained from various references that were read and analyzed. Finally, the author analyzes it using the content analysis method.\(^\text{12}\)

---

C. Result and Discussion

Al-Ghazali’s Biography

Abū Ḥāmid Muḥammad bin Muḥammad bin Aḥmad al-Ghazali at-Ṭūsī al-Syāfī’i’y is Al-Ghazali’s full name. He is known as Ḥujjail Islam al-Imām al-Jalil Zain ad-Dīn (defender of Muslims) because of his enormous contribution to defending Islam from various influences of heretical sects and rationalist Greek views. He was born in the village of Gazālah in 450 H, on the outskirts of the city of Ṭūs (which is a region in the Northeastern part of Iran).¹³

Al-Ghazali studied in the area where he was born. He studied the Qur’ān and other basic religious knowledge from his father, al-Ghazali and his younger brother studied jurisprudence from Aḥmad ibn Muḥammad al-Raṣālīn al-Ṭūsī in Ṭūs and tasawuf from Yūsuf an-Nassāj. After that, until 470 H in Jurjin al-Ghazali studied other basic sciences, including Persian and Arabic lessons from Naṣr al-Iṣmā’īl. He had succeeded in mastering various basic sciences as well as two basic languages that were generally used by the scientific community at that time so these two languages led him to be able to understand scientific books on his own at the 20 age.¹⁴

Al-Ghazali left for Naisabūr to continue his education at an-Nizāmīyyah madrasah school, at that time Abū al-Ma’lī ’Abdul-Malik bin ’Abdul-Lah al-Juwayni, who was popularly known as Imam al-Ḥaramain (478 H) who became the leader and teaching staff at the madrasa. It was in this place that he obtained and understood fiqh and usūl fiqh, mantiq science (the science of logic), and the science of kalam from the Asy’ariyah school and other schools that were developing at that time. Imam Ḥaramain gave Al-Ghazali the nickname Bhar Mu’riq (washing ocean), because of his mastery of science, including the science of balaghah (rhetoric). With that, he can refute his opponents with various arguments.¹⁵

¹⁵ Ahmad Fuad Al-Ahwani, Sirah Al-Al-Ghazali Wa Al-Aqwal Al-Mutaqaddimin Fih (Damaskus: Dar Al Fikr, n.d.), 7.
Al-Ghazali is also known as a philosopher, Sufi, and usūl expert. In the discipline of kalam, al-Ghazali is a mutakallimin figure from the Ash’ariyah school. Whereas in the disciplines of Islamic law (fiqh and usūl fiqh), he is a Syafi’iyah scholar. A few years later after Al-Juwaini died in 484 H/1091 AD, al-Ghazali was confirmed as a professor at the Niẓāmiyyah madrasa in Baghdad. This is a very high achievement, considering that at that time he was only 34 years old, al-Ghazali was given the title of Sheikh al-Islāmi, which is the highest title in the academic and religious fields.¹⁶

Imam al-Ghazali died Monday, 14 Jumadil Akhir 505 H / 1111 AD shortly before sunrise in the City of Tūs where he was born and was buried in the capital of Tūs, Zhabibir al-Tabiran.¹⁷ While the scientific works he left behind cover various fields of religious science, including fiqh, usūl fiqh, usūl ad-dīn, logic (logic), kalam, philosophy, to Sufism.¹⁸ Some of his famous works include Tahāfut al-Falāsifah, al-Muqiż min ʿaḍ-Ḍalāl, al-Mustaṣfā min ʿIbm al-Uṣūl and Iḥyaʾ Ulūm ad-Dīn.¹⁹

Concept of Maṣlaḥah al-Ghazali

Compared to other usūl thinkers, al-Ghazali’s research on maṣlaḥah is perhaps the most important because it is comprehensive and in-depth. According to al-Ghazali, maṣlaḥah is a statement to obtain something that is useful (benefit) or negates something bad (damage) in the most basic sense (aṣlān). However, that is not what is meant because to obtain good and eliminate evil is the goal (maqāṣid) desired by the creator (Khalq), as well as the benefit of creation (aṣ-ṣullu) to achieve the goal (maqāṣid). Maṣlaḥah refers to the upholding of five principles. The objective goals of the five principles of Islamic law are to protect religion, protect the soul, protect the mind, protect offspring, and protect property. Maṣlaḥah refers to something that upholds these five principles (usūl), while mafsada refers to all things that negate these five principles, and efforts to reject or oppose them are called maṣlaḥah.

¹⁷ Syamy, Al-Imam Al-Ghazali Hujaatun Al-Islam Wa Mujaddid Al-Mi‘at Al-Khamisah. (A’lam Al-Muslimin Seri 43), Cet I.
¹⁸ Syuhbhan Taqiqyudiddin Abi Bakr nin Ahmad bin Qadhi syuhbah al-Asady Al-Dimasqy, Taqabaqat Al-Fuqa’bah Al-Syaṣšiyah (Kairo: Maktahah al-Tsaqafah al-diniyah, n.d.), 279.
¹⁹ Al-Ahwani, Sirah Al-Al-Ghazali Wa Al-Aqwal Al-Mutaqaddimin Fib.

So, it can be understood that maṣlaḥah and maṣṣādāh have a close relationship. Maṣlaḥah is an effort to realize the benefit of mankind based on the principles of Islamic law, while maṣṣādāh is the opposite of these principles. Therefore, in applying Islamic law, maṣlaḥah must be prioritized and maṣṣādāh must be avoided as much as possible.

Al-Ghazali's thoughts regarding maslahah are found in the book of al-Mustaṣfā. The full title of the book is al-Mustaṣfā min ʿIlm al-Uṣūl, written by al-Ghazali himself after returning from the city of Damascus and continuing to teach at Naisābūr. Based on Ibn Khalkān’s notes, the book was completed on 6 Muharram 505 H and became his last work in the field of ʿṣūl fiqh. Several Muslim scholars, including Sheikh Muḥammad al-Khuḍārī (d. 1345 H.) and Dr. Badran Ab al-ʿAinain. Badran thinks that among the three books of Al-Muʿtamad, Al-Burḥān fī Uṣūl al-Fiḥ, and Al-Mustaṣfā, the best is al-Mustaṣfā, both in terms of beauty, systematism, depth of language, or complementary explanations which are not in the previous book.

From al-Ghazali’s scholarly writings in the field of ʿṣūl fiqh and appreciation from later scholars, it is only natural that al-Ghazali is known as a ʿṣūl fiqh figure who belongs to the Ṣyāfi’i school of thought. Apart from his monumental work, namely Ḥyad ʿUlim ad-Dīn, the book of al-Mustaṣfā is very well-known in Islamic intellectual treasures. The figure of al-Ghazali cannot be separated from the two titles of this work. Specifically related to the explanatory model used in his book al-Mustaṣfā, al-Ghazali tends to use the method of dialogue (discussion), whether related to theoretical, casuistic, or arguments, therefore terms such as qīla - qulnā appear (you ask - we answer) in each discussion of the theme, as well as in the discussion of istiṣlāḥ.

Istiṣlāḥ is another term for al-Maṣlaḥah.
Al-Ghazali started discussing maṣlaḥah in his book al-Muṣṭaṣfā with the statement that istishlah is min al-uṣūl al-mauhūmah. At first glance, this expression gives an understanding of maṣlaḥah's argument as a legal basis or uṣūl, which still has problems. This was confirmed by Al-Ghazali's statement in which he stated that there were differences of opinion among the scholars regarding the legality of al-Maṣlaḥah.24

According to al-Ghazali, from a ṣyara' point of view, al-maṣlaḥah is divided into three things. First, maṣlaḥah which is considered correct by the Shari'a. Second, maṣlaḥah which is considered null and void by the Shari'a. Third, maṣlaḥab is not considered correct and also not considered null and void by the Shari'a or there is no specific text which considers it correct or which considers null and void.25

Maṣlaḥah mursalah in al-Ghazali's view is a maṣlaḥah for which there is no textual argument, whereas only those that have textual evidence can be used as evidence which have three characteristics, namely ḍarrāriyah, qaṭ'iyah, and kulliyah. Al-Ghazali explained this by giving an example if there are infidels who protect themselves with a group of Muslim captives while they are carrying out attacks on the infidels' defenses, it is tantamount to killing Muslims who did nothing wrong. If the Muslims do not attack, the infidels will defeat Islamic territory. In such a situation, it is permissible to argue that even if the Muslims did not commit the attack, the lives of the Muslim prisoners were in danger. Therefore, protecting all Muslims is more important than protecting a group of people. This opinion can be justified. After all, it refers to the three criteria above, namely a state of urgency because it involves deciding to maintain one of the principles of survival. This can protect the lives of Muslims. This problem is global because it concerns the interests of all people, not just some people.26

According to al-Ghazali, maṣlaḥah is not part of the four foundations of Islamic law, namely the Koran, sunnah, ijma', and qiyyās which are the foundations of thinking and ijtihad. The explanation regarding maṣlaḥah is only a complement to the four legal foundations, in which al-Ghazali argues that maṣlaḥah is not one of the four legal bases that may be used as evidence. Maṣlaḥah is not discussed in the discussion chapter on the methodology of interpretation and reasoning even though it is not explicitly mentioned in it. Even though maṣlaḥah is not the legal basis used by al-Ghazali, references to maṣlaḥah are still made by him in the legal chapter contained in al-Mustaṣfã’s book. Al-Ghazali also gave references to maṣlaḥah in the chapter which discusses the method of thought.\(^{27}\)

---

24 Zaki, “Formulasi Standar Maslahah Dalam Hukum Islam (Studi Atas Pemikiran Al-Ghazali Dalam Kitab Al-Muṣṭaṣfā).”
25 Al-Gazali, Al-Muṣṭaṣfā Fi Ḥilm Al-Uṣūl.

There are two valid istinbat methods, namely as-sabr wa al-taqsim (observation and classification; elimination method) and munasabah (combined). In this munāsabah, maṣlaḥah is the main element combined with ṣyara’ which is often discussed by al-Ghazali. Munāsib is interpreted like maṣāliḥ, but munāsabah is not the same as maṣlaḥah. Even though al-Ghazali’s analysis of munasib in terms of effectiveness and validity is the same as maṣlaḥah, the detailed statement is different.\(^{28}\)

Based on al-Ghazali’s opinion, munāsib (something that fits, according to the place of use) is divided into four. First, according to and strengthened by certain texts. Second, it is not appropriate and is not supported by the textual argument. Third, it is not appropriate but is strengthened by the textual argument. Fourth, it is strengthened by the textual argument. Al-Ghazali explained that the first category can be agreed upon by the majority of jurists. The second is istiḥsān, namely establishing laws based on personal authority. The third is istiḥlaḥ or istiḍāl al-mursalah. Based on this grouping, it is clear that maṣlaḥah is the basis for consideration in deciding the suitability or munāsabah of something that is not in istiḥsān. However, munāsabah and maṣlaḥah depend on their suitability and affirmation of the text in general. If not, it falls under the category of istiḥsān.\(^{29}\)

The Significance of Al-Ghazali’s Maṣlaḥah Concept to the Development of Uṣūl fiqh and Islamic Law

Al-Ghazali’s thoughts regarding mashlahah can be understood for his tendency towards fiqh reasoning and qiyās to be used as a method of thought. Therefore, al-

---

\(^{27}\) Nur Asiah.

\(^{28}\) Nur Asiah.
Ghazali studied maslahah based on several conditions. From his theological perspective, al-Ghazali does not accept maslahah only in terms of human benefit. The study of maslahah must be based on existing arguments. Al-Ghazali used a thinking approach by placing maslahah one level after qiyās. Al-Ghazali did not deny maslahah at all like his reaction to rejecting istihṣān, but the criteria he determined in accepting maslahah did not place maslahah in a stand-alone rationale.\(^{30}\)

The classification and definition presented by al-Ghazali were later followed by several jurists according to the genealogy of the uṣūl fiqh works that were known at that time. So strong was the influence of al-Ghazali’s thoughts on maslahah as stated by Ibn Khaldūn that the book al-Mustaṣfā min ‘Ilm al-Uṣūl is still the most important reference that influenced subsequent uṣūl fiqh experts so that al-Rāzī’s very monumental work appeared, namely al-Maḥṣūl.\(^{31}\)

In the context of new matters which are not emphasized in the texts, especially social issues which generally involve the public interest, one must look again at ijtihad which has been widely practiced by companions, tabi‘in and mujtahids. It doesn’t seem too exaggerated if among the several methods above it is emphasized that maslahah method is the most dominant.\(^{32}\)

Likewise the current developments among Islamic jurists, it seems that to solve new problems that arise in society there is a recent trend when they prefer the maqāṣid asy-ṣyarī‘ah method, not the linguistic method. Thus, it means that they are more dominant in using the maslahah approach than other approaches. Is because: First, the development of Islamic law through the maqāṣid method does not require in-depth Arabic language skills as if using the linguistic method. So that the ijtihad requirement in the form of proficiency in Arabic can be minimized. Second (more dominating), new matters that had not occurred at the time the revelation was in the process of being revealed.\(^{33}\)

---

\(^{29}\) Nur Asiah.

\(^{30}\) Nur Asiah.

\(^{31}\) Nur Asiah.

\(^{32}\) Suratmaputra, “Reorientasi Pemikiran Al-Ghazali Tentang Maslahah Mursalah Dengan Pembaruan Hukum Islam.”

\(^{33}\) Suratmaputra.
Settlement of cases like this cannot be resolved by the qiyās approach or other approaches. The right and appropriate approach that must be used to solve this problem is maslahah approach. Al-Ghazali has very deep thoughts about mashallah. He has answered in detail with examples that are acceptable and unacceptable, which can be tolerated and which must be opposed, which are approved and which are disputed. Through maslahah method, al-Ghazali tries to teach about how this maslahah approach is used in dealing with life’s problems. It seems that he is very competent in this field. As a figure of the uṣūliyyin of the Syāfī’i school of thought, it is no exaggeration to say that he has no equal. Al-Ghazali who uses the term maslahah as an approach to istinbat Islamic law and places maslahah as one of the positive considerations in establishing Islamic law is a moderate figure (tawassūṭ). Not as strict as those who completely reject it, not too often rejecting it like the Maliki school, and not too outspoken like at-Tūfī.34

Therefore, in the effort to renew Islamic law, al-Ghazali’s thoughts regarding maslahah are something that can solve various problems in Islamic law that will be experienced by society. Because in a situation where many new problems have arisen and solutions must be found as soon as possible, Muslims can experience many difficulties if they adhere to an ideology that rejects maslahah as the basis that must be considered in determining Islamic law. If this opinion is adhered to, it is feared that other problems will arise which are difficult to find a solution to with Islamic law.35

Regarding the controversy over the concept of maslahah, one of the scholars who reject the concept of maslahah is Imam Syafi’i. Imam Shafi’i believes that the provisions of syara’ are sufficient, namely the Qur’an, hadith, ijmā’, and qiyās.36 The use of the concept of maslahah as a valid source of Islamic law has indeed become a matter of debate among uṣūl fiqh scholars. Most uṣūl fiqh scholars consider that the concept of maslahah can be used as a valid source of Islamic law because it is based on the principle of public interest (maslahah) and is consistent with the objectives of 34 Suratmaputra.

Islamic law. Meanwhile, other uṣūl fiqh scholars consider that the concept of maṣlaḥah is a weak source of Islamic law because it has no basis in texts and can be subject to personal interpretation. Some uṣūl fiqh scholars take a middle path in using maṣlaḥah as a valid source of Islamic law. They argue that maṣlaḥah can be used as a source of Islamic law, but only in cases where there are clear benefits to society and where it does not conflict with the principles of Islamic law.37

Although it is still being debated among uṣūl fiqh scholars about the use of the concept of maṣlaḥah which can be used as a valid reference in Islamic law, al-Ghazali’s concept of maṣlaḥah has had a significant influence on the development of uṣūl fiqh. It incidentally is a methodology of Islamic law.38

There are six points of a significant influence of al-Ghazali's maṣlaḥah concept in the development of uṣūl fiqh and Islamic law, including First, al-Ghazali's concept of maṣlaḥah has an important role in uṣūl fiqh and Islamic legal thought because al-Ghazali’s maṣlaḥah provides a basis for understanding the goals Islamic law and how to apply it in various contexts. This foundation helps scholars to make decisions that are to the objectives of Islamic law. Second, al-Ghazali’s rejection of the concept of maṣlaḥah about human benefit alone and his affirmation of the shari' argument which forms the basis of maṣlaḥah has influenced the development of uṣūl fiqh. Third, Al-Ghazali's maṣlaḥah method is a type of maṣlaḥah that has no basis in texts, so it requires deep thought from experts in uṣūl fiqh and Islamic law. Fourth, al-Ghazali’s emphasis on preserving the objective objectives of Islamic law (maqāsid al-syar'ī) has influenced the development of uṣūl al-fiqh and the way scholars approach the interpretation of Islamic law. This approach helps the ulama to make decisions that are in line with the objectives of Islamic law. Fifth, maṣlaḥah al-Ghazali is used as a tool to weigh the benefits and losses of a particular action or decision. This helps the scholars in taking steps in Islamic law so that the decision is expected to be the best decision for society and supports the goals of Islamic law.

Sixth, the concept of maṣlaḥah al-Ghazali is used to determine whether or not certain actions or decisions are permissible. This helps jurists to make decisions that are in line with the principles of Islamic law.

D. Conclusion

The concept of maṣlaḥah al-Ghazali is a concept used in solving problems of Islamic law because basically, the principle contained in maṣlaḥah is to maintain the objectives of Islamic law (maqāṣid al-ṣyari‘ah), namely to preserve religion, soul, mind, lineage, and property. Al-Ghazali is a major Islamic figure who made an extraordinary contribution to the development of the concept of maṣlaḥah in the science of uṣūl fiqh. For al-Ghazali, maṣlaḥah approach should be based on syar‘i arguments and not only on ratios. He emphasized that maṣlaḥah can be accepted if there are three characteristics, namely darīrijab, qaṭ‘iyab, and kulliyab. Al-Ghazali also does not accept the concept of maṣlaḥah which is related to human benefit alone, because the study of maṣlaḥah must focus on the available texts. The concept of maṣlaḥah al-Ghazali has significant implications for the development of uṣūl fiqh and Islamic law because this concept provides a clear picture of the purpose of Islamic law and how to apply it in different contexts. Overall, the concept of maṣlaḥah al-Ghazali has played a significant role in the development of uṣūl fiqh and has influenced the way scholars approach the interpretation of Islamic law. It helps the cleric (ulama) to make decisions that are in line with the principles of Islamic law.

Bibliography

The Significance of Al-Ghazali’s Maṣlahah Concept to the Development of Usūl Fiqh and Islamic Law

